Bill and Hillary Clinton are on quite a roll in terms of being censored by the mainstream media lately. It seems each and every time they want to get their message out, they are prevented. They most recently had to cancel a scheduled interview with CBS This Morning. Now they've also been censored from the news in Japan. The Clintons are set to speak in Japan next week and some Japanese media outlets are reporting that they've been banned from speaking publicly. They have been booked to appear at a Japan Times conference in Tokyo on November 22nd. "We're not allowed to say a single word," said a spokesman for the Japan Times magazine, after numerous attempts to reach the Clintons for comment. He added: "They're not going to appear at all." Later, sources confirmed that the Clintons had cancelled a subsequent appearance after The Guardian questioned the right of the magazine to screen the interview. It is understood the Clinton camp
